TransportationCamp is an unconference that brings together hundreds of people working at the intersection of innovation and transportation to share, learn, draw inspiration, and network.

Since the original events in New York City and San Francisco in 2011, TransportationCamps have taken place in multiple cities, attracting thinkers, doers, and leaders in transportation and technology.

TransportationCamp New England 2018 is the fourth held in New England. On Saturday, April 21st, it will attract over 300 attendees, including students, professionals, and transportation and technology enthusiasts. The event will channel the wealth of people, ideas, and organizations into a productive day of participant-led sessions.

The format of this conference allows collaborative exploration of the latest trends in transportation and how to build connections between disparate innovators in public administration, transportation planning, transportation operations, information design, and software engineering.

We invite you to support this year's TransportationCamp as an attendee or a sponsoring partner!
